Teachings

“Joy in Being” – An Edited Excerpt From Oral Teachings Given by Geshe Tenzin Wangyal Rinpoche, Spring 2009

As we engage in regular meditation practice, we come to recognize our limits as practitioners. We can benefit from trying to understand those limits, and from working with them in a way that helps us to be less conditioned by them. Then, we can work on gradually breaking free of them.

Initially our limitations will continue to affect us, so we can try to work with them so that they affect us in a more positive way. But eventually we want to go beyond all limitations, otherwise they will continue to condition us. Regardless of whether the effects are positive or negative, they are limitations.

A simple example is the joy of having versus the joy of being. The joy of having clearly has limitations — whether it is the joy of having money, possessions, relationships, or other positive external supports. You either have something or you don't have it. When you have, you are happy; however, it is also the case that when you don't have, you are definitely unhappy. Whereas for the joy of being — you can never lose your being. When you can discover the joy of abiding in the natural state, joy is not limited by having or not having.

A lot of people are not even happy when they do have. So as a first step, you can try to find a happiness that is based on recognizing that you are already blessed with many gifts. You don't always have to look at what it is that you don't have, you can look at what you do have and learn to be happy with it. Then gradually, you can grow to not be so conditioned by what you do have. Now and then, take a moment to imagine that all you have can be gone in one second. In one second, everything you own can disappear. And in the end, anyway, all that you own is guaranteed to not remain yours. Therefore, it is best not to be that attached to things right from the beginning, because just think about it — it's guaranteed to not be yours one day. Someday somebody else will be enjoying your bedroom; that's guaranteed. Someday someone else will be remodeling your kitchen that you have put a lot of energy into; that's guaranteed. So don't get too attached to what you have created there. Rather, appreciate and enjoy and live fully.

From there you can realize it is possible to move from that place of conditional joy to the place where your joy is found internally in the simple experience of being. This is the joy you are less likely to lose, for you can never not be. Once that shift begins to happen, then you are breaking some conditions. That is called true realization, right?

Students Report From Around the World

News from Poland

Urszula and Bogdan Waszut, administrators for the Ciamma Ling retreat center near Warsaw, Poland, report that recent renovations at Ciamma Ling now provide a new, pleasurable setting for relaxing and resting. In an area surrounded by pinewoods, an old pool was removed and replaced with a nice place for meditation and physical exercises. This work done in March was made possible by the annual financial contributions of sangha members. Two sangha members gave additional financial help and spent more than 50 hours working on this project. Urszula and Bogdan created the video below as a way to thank their donors and share beautiful images of Ciamma Ling in winter. Wilga – the Space of Loving Mother
Ciamma Ling 2010

Travelling together through this magical space we find ourselves beyond boundaries, in deep silence.

Just stop for a while, right now, step by step, a taste of experience...

For one thousand useless words there is one true; hearing this, peace arises.

All that is composed is subject to disintegration.

Follow your way to destination, persevere.

When mind is looking into mind, substantiality of phenomena disappear.

Every moment is an opportunity to share love.

If you catch the king of primordial perception, impurities become his servants.

As rain penetrates into a house with a bad roof, desires enter an untrained mind.

Nothing is worth being an object of desire. Space is already here, open and hospitable.

For the one who can see, nothing is permanent.

There are many ways but only one destination. Even the longest journey starts with a first step...

Works of renovation of our retreat center are in progress. If you feel like joining us in our activities, you are welcome to support us in one of the following projects: renovation of cabins, kitchen, cafeteria, completion of the gompa, building a dormitory in the old laundry...

News from Hungary

Katalin Jakab reports that quite a big practice group from The Gate of Dharma Buddhist College Budapest was able to attend teachings and meet Tenzin Wangyal Rinpoche at the end of March in Vienna. The students appreciated the teachings and most of them plan to start the five-year training with Rinpoche beginning in October 2010.

As a teacher for the College as well as translator of two of Rinpoche's books into Hungarian, Katalin encouraged the students to read Rinpoche's books in advance in preparation for his teachings. She says she hopes that local sangha in Europe will join together in inviting Rinpoche to teach the Healing Practice of Sipe Gyalmo, the topic of his recent teachings at Ligmincha Institute's annual spring retreat at Serenity Ridge. To inquire further about this or about ordering the books in Hungarian, email Katalin Jakab &gt;

A note from VOCL editors: We are happy to be able to share news from students around the world and hope you will enjoy reading bits about what's going on in the centers and sanghas where Tenzin Wangyal Rinpoche teaches around the globe.
