Sharings from Around the World

Recharging with Soul Retrieval in the New Year

Soul Retrieval participants from around the world share their insights through poetry and photos.

This poem is by Sibylle Reuter-Beck, who lives in Murnau, a small town in the very south of Germany close to the Alps:

Do you know the silence that takes your breath away.
Do you know the vastness
that swallows your fear.
Do you know the shiver
when your soul awakes.

You know it on that one night that wraps you in her vast cloak and bares your star.

And here is the original version in German:

Kennst du die Ruhe,
die dir den Atem verschlägt.
Kennst du die Weite,
die deine Angst verschlingt.
Kennst du das Schaudern, wenn deine Seele erwacht.

Du kennst es in dieser einen Nacht,
die dich umhüllt mit ihrem weiten Kleid
und deinen Stern gebiert.

This poem is from Birrell Walsh, who lives near the beach in San Francisco. The photo was taken nearby at Ocean Beach:

Storm's Daughter

Sometimes we rest in calm seas
at ease, and warm
& sometimes we rest in storm
& storm's daughter, white water.

These two poems with artwork of the five elements are by Melissa (Storm Khandro Melissa Moon), who lives in North Devon, England:

The Five Elements

Steadfast and rooted, protective and immovable, a rock.

Navigating the wave of joy, precarious.

Wild abandon, leaping over the fire, getting lost in the sparks.

Perfection of action, beautiful music, skillfulness.

Dissolving into bliss, a full heart.

Earth

Standing your ground, staff firmly in the Earth.

Wave the wave, followed by a large wall of water.

Flaming over the fire, soaring for a moment.

Airline organ keeping a ball perfectly aloft.

Heart emerging from the depths of space.
